

I do not want to return to the days when my phone would ring at all times of the day and night, disturbing my meal times and my sleep, only to deliver some sales pitch. It invaded my privacy and made my telephone an enemy in my home. Mail me as many sales pitches as can be made, but leave my telephone as an instrument for my communication, not the communication of business. My home is my home, not an office. Do not do away with the "Do Not Call List"!
